1) Introduction:
   • IMF’s loans —> anti-poverty for Haiti —> escalation in violence, though mainly the intensification of structural violence.
   • The healthcare system —> aftermath of the earthquake and IMF loans.

2) Historical context:
   • The 2010 Haiti earthquake was a catastrophic earthquake, with an epicenter near the town of Léogâne (Ouest), approximately 25 kilometres (16 mi) west of Port-au-Prince, Haiti’s capital.
   • Dominique Strauss-Kahn, the IMF’s managing director, has made clear that in future he would like to see all the Fund’s lending to Haiti cancelled. “Looking beyond the emergency phase, and as part of an international plan to rebuild the country, there will be a need to reassess Haiti’s debt situation in light of the catastrophic damage to its economy.” He also stated “at that stage, the international community needs to be ready to provide comprehensive debt relief.”

3) Empirical data: Voices of the doctors/patience

4) Theory: How do Paul Farmer, and other anthropologists, think about structural violence?
